After weeks of campaigning, Roger Lawson failed to secure support for the major changes to UKSA that he was seeking. The resolution to remove Martin White (chairman of the board), Derek Miles and Eric Chalker was defeated by 437 votes to 202. The resolution to elect Roger Lawson to the board was defeated by an even greater margin, 467 votes to 188.

UKSA's recently strengthened board of directors welcomes this emphatic endorsement of the direction the organisation has been taking and will now press on with promotion of the UKSA Manifesto and increasing the influence of private investors generally.
